במדבר ט"ז, א': ויקח קורח בן יצחק בן יצחק בן לוי וידמו ויאבדו ויאזון בן יצחק בן יצחק בן לוי ויאבדו:

רש"י ד"ה ויקח קרח: פרשה זו יפה נדרשת במדרש רבי תנחומא: ויקח קרח: לקח את עצמו לצד אחד להיות נחלק מתוך העדה לעורר על הכהונה, וזהו שתרגם אונקלוס ואתפלא, נחלק משאר העדה להחזיק במחלוקת. וכן (איוב ט"ו, י"ב) מה יקחך לבך, לוקח אותך להפליגך משאר בני אדם. דבר אחר ויקח קרח, משך ראשי סנהדראות שבהם בדברים, כמו שנאמר (במדבר כ', כ"ה) קח את אהרן, (הושע י"ד, ג') קחו עמכם דברים:

Bamidbar 16:1: Korach the son of Yitzhar, the son of Kehos, the son of Levi took (himself to one side) together with Doston and Avirom the sons of Eliov, and On the son of Peles, who were descendants of Reuvain.

Rashi Heading: Korach... took: This portion is beautifully expounded on in the Midrash of Rabbi Tanchumah.

Korach... took: He took himself to one side to exclude himself from the congregation in order to contest the Kehunah. This is what Onkelos means when he translates it “and he separated himself.” He separated himself from the congregation to continue in a dispute. Similarly<sup>1</sup> “Why does your heart take you away?” meaning that it removes you, to isolate you from others. Another explanation is that he attracted the heads of the Sanhedrin among them with his words. Similarly<sup>2</sup> “Take Aharon (with words);” “Take words with you<sup>3</sup>.”

Synopsis

This week we read the Torah of Korach. We are told of a rebellion against Aharon holding the position of Kohen Gadol. This rebellion was led by Korach who had managed to gather 250 leaders of the Jews on his side. In Rashi's comments on the opening verse he cites the words from the verse “Korach ... took.” All that he says is that “this portion is explained beautiful in the Midrash of Rabbi Tanchumah. He offers no explanation whatsoever. He then cites the same exact words once again, this time telling us what the beautiful explanation is. Rashi explains that he removed himself from the congregation. He then goes on to offer a second explanation which is according to Peshat rather than Midrash. He says that Korach managed to attract the heads of the Sanhedrin and win them over to his side.

1. Iyov 15:12.

2. Bamidbar 20:25. See Rashi's comments there. He says that Moshe was to “take” Aharon with words of solace.

3. Hoshea 14:3.

THE RASHI OF THE WEEK

Rashi always explains Peshat. Why does he begin by just telling us how beautifully this is expounded in the Midrash? He waits until later in a different set of comments to tell us Peshat!

We know that despite the fact that Rashi's main point is to explain Peshat to a beginning student his comments also contain the "wine of Torah," meaning the mysteries of Torah<sup>4</sup>. According to the simple meaning of the verses the story of Korach is a very sad one involving a mutiny against Moshe Rabbeinu! However if we look at it from the perspective of the mysteries of the Torah Korach was on an extremely high level; it is indeed a lofty story<sup>5</sup>! Korach wanted to be a Kohen Gadol!

This is what Rashi is alluding to with his explanation. Even before explaining Peshat, he tells us that this is expounded (not just well, but) beautifully in the Midrash. The Midrash brings out the inner meaning of what took place. Rashi writes that "he took himself." He revealed the essence of his being, his soul. Rashi goes further and says that "he took himself to one side." Rashi says that he did this in order to "separate himself from the congregation." He elevated himself above everyone else in the same manner that the Kohen Gadol is elevated above the rest of the Jews.

Rashi's Explanation

This week's Torah portion, Korach, tells of a rebellion against Moshe and Aharon's leadership. The revolt was championed by Korach who managed to persuade 250 people in leadership positions to join with him. The Parshah begins by telling us that<sup>6</sup> "Korach the son of Yitzhar, the son of Kehos, the son of Levi took (himself to one side) together with Doston and Avirom the sons of Eliov, and On the son of Peles, who were descendants of Reuvain." Rashi first cites the words "Korach ... took" and makes an introductory statement. He says that "This portion is beautifully expounded on in the Midrash of Rabbi Tanchumah." This alone is most unusual for Rashi.

He then cites the same words from the verse and begins telling us the Midrashic explanation to which he alluded. "He took himself to one side to exclude himself from the congregation in order to contest the Kehunah. This is what Onkelos means when he translates it 'and he separated himself.' He separated himself from the congregation to continue in a dispute. Similarly<sup>1</sup> 'Why does your heart take you away?' meaning that it removes you, to isolate you from others." He then offers a second explanation which is according to Peshat. "Another explanation is that he attracted the heads of the Sanhedrin among them with his words. Similarly<sup>2</sup> 'Take Aharon (with words);' 'Take words with you<sup>3</sup>.'"

THE RASHI OF THE WEEK

Difficulties in Understanding Rashi

As we wrote earlier, it is very uncommon for Rashi to write an introduction to his comments. Before commenting at all he announces that it is beautifully expounded in a Midrash.

We have stated many times that Rashi's main purpose is to explain Peshat, the simple meaning of each verse in the Torah. We know this because he himself says as much on many occasions<sup>7</sup>. The fact is that hidden within Rashi's words there are also included deep mysteries of the Torah, known as the "wine of Torah"<sup>4</sup>. However Rashi's is primarily to provide a guide to the beginning student. Why would he present as his first explanation something which comes from a Midrash? Not just that, but he makes a point of emphasizing that it is beautifully expounded there.

There is usually a reason for Rashi offering two explanations for the same thing. Generally there is a question which can be asked about the first explanation. The second explanation does not have that particular difficulty. However he teaches it first because it is closer to Peshat. Here however, his first comments are not Peshat at all; rather they are a Midrash.

A Deeper Explanation of Rashi

We will understand this by first answering a different question. Korach was a rebel. He was a sinner who never did Teshuvah<sup>8</sup>. How can we call a portion of the Torah by his name? This is contrary to what we are taught that<sup>9</sup> "...the name of the wicked shall rot." This is certainly so considering that the entire portion, with all that it entails is called by his name. This is a question which would also bother a beginning student.

Granted, the same is true regarding the Torah portion of Balak. Balak was the king of Midian; an evil person who wanted to curse the Jewish people. Yet a Torah portion is called by his name as well<sup>10</sup>. It is true that this fact does not answer our question; it merely expands it. Additionally, even a child who is just beginning to study Chumash understands that a Jew who becomes wicked is even worse than a gentile who becomes wicked. Hence in our case the question certainly applies!

This will be understood based on the fact that from the perspective of the hidden, deeper aspects of Torah, Korach actually wanted something positive. He wanted to be a Kohen, as Moshe said to Korach's band<sup>11</sup> "... and now you seek the Kehunah as well!" Not only did he seek Kehunah, but he wanted to become a Kohen Gadol<sup>12</sup>! In other words he wanted to be on a higher, more exalted level than he was. He actually wanted to attain the level of a High Priest. Regarding the Kohen Gadol we are taught that he was<sup>13</sup> "... separated ... to be most holy." Korach actually wanted to be separate from all worldly matters.

See also Bereishis 3:24, "There are Midrashim, but I have come only to interpret its simple meaning." These are just two examples of many.

8. His children did do Teshuvah. This is found in the Talmud Sanhedrin Page 110, Side a. It is also found in Rashi's comments to our Parshah 16:7, and to Bamidbar 26:11.

The desire to be higher was certainly a great thing. Moshe Rabbeinu himself said that he also wanted to be a Kohen Gadol<sup>14</sup>. Indeed he had that desire. But in actuality there can only be one High Priest<sup>14</sup>.

This can be more clearly understood based on what is written in this week's Parshah in Likkutei Torah<sup>5</sup>. The Alter Rebbe writes that "the root of Korach's rebellion ... is that in the time of the ultimate redemption the Levites will be Kohanim. Korach wanted this conduct to be instituted in the present. His mistake was that such a thing is only possible once the world has reached complete perfection." This means to say that Korach wished to accomplish that our world now should be on the same level that it will be with the coming of Moshiach.

This is all alluded to in Rashi's comments here. Even before explaining Peshat, he tells us that this is expounded in the Midrash. The Midrash brings out the inner meaning of what took place. It demonstrates that it was all actually good. Rashi does not merely say that the Midrash explains it well, but rather beautifully. Granted, this story does not seem to be at all positive. However the Midrash expounds upon it and reveals that it is truly beautiful. Furthermore Rashi tells us that this Midrash is that of Rabbi Tanchumah. The name Tanchumah is related to the Hebrew word "Nechomoh," meaning consolation. The story seems negative, but the Midrash consoles us by bringing out its positive aspects.

Rashi says that "he took himself." He revealed the essence of his being, his soul. Rashi goes further and says that "he took himself to one side." Rashi says that he did this in order to "separate himself from the congregation." His wish was to elevate himself above everyone else. He wanted to be elevated in the same manner as a Kohen Gadol. Rashi quotes the Aramaic word used by Targum Onkelus, that "he separated himself." His entire desire was to rise above the rest of the nation by reaching the level of a High Priest. He wanted to be<sup>13</sup> "... separated ... to be most holy."

Korach went even further, saying that<sup>15</sup> "the entire congregation are all holy." Rashi comments there that "...All of them heard Hashem's words Sinai from His mouth (as so to speak) ... Not only did you heard at Sinai, 'I am the Lord, your G-d,' the entire congregation heard it." He claimed that we all received the Torah together from Hashem. At that time all Jews became<sup>16</sup> “a nation of Kohanim.” As explained by the commentaries<sup>17</sup> we all became fit to become High Priests. This was Korach’s claim when seen through the prism of the “wine of Torah.”
